5th International Plecoptera Symposium
September 3-6, 1974, Washington, D.C.

After four meetings in Europe: Lausanne, Switzerland, 1956; Vienna, Austria, 1960; Plön, Germany, 1963; and Abisko, Sweden, 1968, the first international meeting of plecopterists in North America is about to become a reality.

Response to the invitation circular sent out during the Fall of 1973 has been very encouraging. More than sixty application blanks have been returned and many people indicate that they will be bringing collegues or family members.

The symposium will include two daily sessions on September 3-5 and a field excursion to the Shenandoah Mountains on September 6. A plecopterists' luncheon is also planned for September 4.

Judging from the titles submitted, the symposium will be very interesting and educational. It will serve as an excellent opportunity for young workers to meet collegues and gain ideas and knowledge for future endeavors.

The proceedings of the symposium will be published in a condensed form. Those unable to attend but interested in the proceedings should write to Dr. Richard W. Baumann, organizing chairman.
