

J. Don Lafontaine is a Research Scientist with the Canadian National Collection of Insects and has worked for Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada for the past 32 years. He is the author of some 60 papers in refereed scientific journals, five peer reviewed books, and 6 web-based publications. In addition to being a scientist with the Canadian government, he is a Research Associate with The Smithsonian Institution, Washington, DC; Past-President of The Lepidopterists= Society; Vice-President of The Wedge Entomological Research Foundation, Washington, DC (publishers of The Moths of North America series); and Division Editor for Systematics, Evolution, and Morphology for The Canadian Entomologist, a bimonthly research journal.