

penetrate a single layer of brown paper. Further more, it would appear that in following a trail this bitch is ready at any moment to be guided by inference as well as perception and that the act of inference is instantaneous. Lastly, the experiments show that not only the feet (as these affect the boots) but likewise the whole body of a man exhales a peculiar or individual odour, which a dog can recognise as that of his master amidst a crowd of other persons; that the individual quality of this odour can be recognized at great distances to windward, or, in calm weather, at great distances in any direction; and that this odour, is not overcome by aniseed. — J. Murie.
