Introduction

The species rich family Encyrtidae is poorly known in Eritrea. Until now, only 37 species representing the subfamilies Encyrtinae and Tetraceminae have been recorded. The subfamily Encyrtinae is represented by 27 species in the genera Acerophagus SMITH, 1880, Anicetus HOWARD, 1896, Anthemus HOWARD, 1896, Cheiloneurus WESTWOOD, 1833, Diversinervus SILVESTRI, 1915, Encyrtus LATREILLE, 1809, Habrolepis FOERSTER, 1856, Homalotylus MAYR, 1876, Metaphycus MERCET, 1917, Microterys THOMSON, 1876, Prochiloneurus SILVESTRI, 1915, Psyllaephagus ASHMEAD, 1900 and Tremblaya TRJAPITZIN, 1985. The subfamily Tetraceminae is known by the genera Aenasius WALKER, 1846, Allocerellus SILVESTRI, 1915, Anagyrus HOWARD, 1896, Clausenia ISHII, 1923, Leptomastidea MERCET, 1916, Leptomastix FOERSTER, 1856 and Zaplatycerus TIMBERLAKE, 1925. Five new genera have been described from Eritrea. The genera Diversinervus SILVESTRI, 1915 and Prochiloneurus SILVESTRI, 1915 are members of the subfamily Encyrtinae and the genera Allocerellus SILVESTRI, 1915, Neodiscodes COMPERE, 1931 (synonym of Aenasius WALKER, 1846) and Tropidophryne COMPERE, 1931 (synonym of Zaplatycerus TIMBERLAKE, 1925) belong to the subfamily Tetraceminae.

Encyrtidae are parasitoids or hyperparasitoids of several insect orders (e.g. Coleoptera, Diptera, Hemiptera, Lepidoptera) and spiders. As the hosts are often pests in agriculture and forestry, species of Encyrtidae are used in biological control programs.

PRINSLOO & ANNECKE (1979) provided a key to the Afrotropical genera of Encyrtidae.
