

Guidelines for the authors

To ensure the timely preparation of the conference proceedings please submit your contribution (each talk and/or poster) or an extended abstract thereof.

Papers

You may provide a more detailed account or a summary of your presentation in the conference volume, but all presentations (talk or poster) should be represented in the conference volume. The minimum format would be a short, concise summary that covers all relevant aspects of your work. Your contribution for the conference volume must always include more information than was required for submissions in the conference call.

Utilization rights

To enable you to also publish your presented work elsewhere, we grant you free access to the information contained in your conference volume publication.

Language

English only

Guiding theme

Dynamics and conservation in protected areas - challenges for research and management.

Please take into account the relevant aspects of the conference focus 2013:

Dynamics and conservation in protected areas under conditions of global change and the need to protect diversity.

- Do protected areas achieve the objectives defined for the protection of processes, functions and diversity and where are the limits?
- What are currently the most relevant research priorities, research questions, methods and recent results – regional and supra-regional, short- and long-term?
- Long-term ecosystem research: What do we know from science and practice (e.g. conservation monitoring, indicators, LTER, ...)?
- Where do protected areas, their regions and their networks currently stand regarding research and management?
