

weather. Though not strictly part of the program, the social gatherings in the evenings, symposia strictly speaking, formed an important part of the meeting and provided most welcome additional opportunities for discussions and exchange of thoughts. Publication of a report on the 6th International Symposium on Plecoptera is intended.

At the end of the last session, T. Kawai made an invitation for the 7th International Symposium on Plecoptera to be held in Nara, Japan, in 1980, in conjunction with the International Congresses of Entomology and Limnology in near-by Kyoto. Honorary President J. Aubert extended an alternative invitation to Lausanne, Switzerland, 1981. Both were thanked and the invitation to Nara was accepted by the majority of the symposium participants.

NEWS: Ken Stewart and Bill Stark have undertaken the project of producing a volume on the nymphs of North American stoneflies. It will be in the format of the excellent book recently published by Glenn Wiggins on North American caddisfly larvae. All our North American colleagues are requested to lend their support to this study which will be a big help to everyone interested in aquatic insects.
