ILLIESIA

Illiesia* Is Closing

R. Edward DeWalt, Ignac Sivec, and Bill Stark

Illiesia, The International Journal of Stonefly Research, was founded by Bill Stark and Nace Sivec in 2005 as a taxonomic journal counterweight to publication models with high page charges and limited access. Illiesia provided a model that was free and completely open access, a noble goal that helped authors to publish 231 articles and two monographs issues (see graph).

Though the pay-to-play model is still alive and well, there are now venues where publication is free and access is open or at nominal cost (Zootaxa is one example). Often these journals allow posting of pdf copies of articles on social media sites to promote
